Introduction

There have been substantial improvements in technical aspects of mining. While these improvements can be partially credited for reducing the number of mine emergencies that occur each year, the fact remains that they will continue to occur. As a result, Bottleneck #1 Mine must be prepared for a positive response in the event of an emergency.

After the onset of an emergency, confusion and disorder are normal. Since all emergencies are unique, a program dealing with every kind of situation is not possible. However, there are certain elements that are common to most emergency settings. Having a written plan can reduce the amount of confusion and disorder associated with a mine emergency. This plan offers basic guidelines for responding when an emergency occurs. Use this plan to manage a mine emergency. The plan includes:

1. Plan activation checklist
2. Call out roster
3. Duties and responsibilities for mine/corporate personnel
4. Travel directions
5. List of suppliers and services

Plan Activation

After receiving notification of a mine emergency, the level of the response depends on the extent of the emergency. Federal, state and local mandates should be followed in managing the situation. The following points are a checklist and are not intended to be implemented in the sequence presented. The extent of the emergency will dictate to what degree the emergency response plan is implemented.

- Establish communication
- Notify mine superintendent or person in charge
- Activate emergency response plan
- Contact emergency medical services if someone is injured
- Notify Mine Safety and Health Administration
- Notify state mining agency
- Notify mine rescue team(s)
- Notify local law enforcement
- Establish command center
- Contact key personnel for support
- Initiate event log to record all events that take place during the emergency
- Initiate check in/check out procedures
- Establish facilities (offices) for emergency
- Initiate mine monitoring procedures
- Evaluate:
 - Underground Utilities
 - Communications
 - Ventilation
 - Power
 - Water
